God's Grace to a Suburban Girl: Lessons from the Farm

When I was dating my husband, we went to a petting zoo and held a rabbit. I had a special place in my heart for pet rabbits, so I said that I wanted one. Jeff responded, "You can have a rabbit, when I get a cow."

He was serious, but I did not take him seriously. Thinking he would outgrow this crazy idea, we moved on.

It was probably good that I could not see how that experience would play out in our future. Twenty years later, God took this suburban girl and plopped her down on 80 acres in the middle of nowhere with a husband, two sons, and a borrowed dream.

Join me at Heart of a Pioneer Woman to find out how God used a season of anxiety to cultivate freedom in my life.
